Wine, the beverage described most frequently by the biblical writers, played important roles in the ancient Israelite diet, economy, and religious life. The recent discovery of a large, well-preserved winery complex at Jezreel, in the fertile Jezreel Valley in Israel's Galilee, offers insights into the technology of wine production in the Iron Age (ca. 1200-586 BCE) and provides context for the dramatic story of Naboth’s vineyard in 1 Kings 21. In this lecture, Prof. Ebeling will discuss wine’s significance in Israelite culture, present the results of the excavation of the Jezreel winery, and suggest how this discovery informs our understanding of the bloody events surrounding Ahab and Jezebel at Jezreel.

Jennie Ebeling (Ph.D. The University of Arizona) is Associate Professor of Archaeology at the University of Evansville in Indiana and co-director of the Jezreel Expedition in Israel. A former Fulbright fellow, she has been awarded fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Lady Davis Trust to support research in Israel and Jordan.

The Jezreel Expedition co-directed by Jennie Ebeling is supported by the Arizona Center for Judaic Studies.