During a ten-year-long project of researching the labor migrant community in South Tel-Aviv. Zubida researched the accommodation of labor migrants, refugees and asylum-seekers in Israel. The patterns of their accommodation resulted in social conflict, economic competition and spatial dislocation between newcomers and ‘indigenous’ populations. The confluence of these populations, on the one hand, brought new cultural fusions, economic advantages (which are sometimes exploitations or the result of exploitation), and on the other, ‘neighborhood renewal’ or gentrification.

Hani Zubida is currently a senior lecturer and the Chair of the political science department at the Max Stern Yzreel Valley College. He is also a well-known media personality in Israel, he anchors and commentates in various television and radio shows both in Hebrew and English. He has specialized in the following fields of knowledge and research: Immigration, Labor Migration, Identity and General Identity, Borders and Social Borders, Israel’s Electoral System, Social-Mobility in Israel Society, Israel Democracy, and its’ socio-economic and political realms.
During a ten-year-long project of researching the labor migrant community in South Tel-Aviv, Zubida researched the accommodation of labor migrants, refugees and asylum-seekers in Israel. The patterns of their accommodation resulted in social conflict, economic competition and spatial dislocation between newcomers and ‘indigenous’ populations. The confluence of these populations, on the one hand, brought new cultural fusions, economic advantages (which are sometimes exploitations or the result of exploitation), and on the other, ‘neighborhood renewal’ or gentrification.

Hani Zubida is currently a senior lecturer and the Chair of the political science department at the Max Stern Yzreel Valley College. He is also a well-known media personality in Israel, he anchors and commentates in various television and radio shows both in Hebrew and English. He has specialized in the following fields of knowledge and research: Immigration, Labor Migration, Identity and General Identity, Borders and Social Borders, Israel’s Electoral System, Social-Mobility in Israel Society, Israel Democracy, and its’ socio-economic and political realms.